2. PRESENTATIONS

A. Zoning & Subdivision Regulation Update
Housing Choice & Neighborhood Design, Downtown Design, Planning and Zoning Process.

Community Development Director Stephen Lachky gave a brief summary of the project update and turned the workshop over to Chris Brewster with Gould Evans.

Mr. Brewster described the project, stating he has picked out highlights of what they assume the public will want to talk about at the May 23rd open house. He has made the issue papers graphic-friendly and asked the steering committee to review and provide their comments. He stated that the project will make the Planning Commission's review process easier to understand; however, the biggest challenge will be meeting a specific criteria if the Commission wishes to determine elements and standards in specific districts, rather than having a review board or standards and criteria specifically stated, such as in a planned district.

General questions and concerns addressed by the commissioners regarded their role and expectations in reviewing design elements, and whether the Planning Commission, the Board of Aldermen or a review board will make those decisions. Other concerns were ensuring applicants have the proper guidelines and information at their disposal for staff and the planning commission to make adequate decisions on the applications being brought before them.

No action was taken.

3. ADJOURNMENT
